thy happineſs? — She replied, In a contented Mind. — Return then, cri the Princeſs Curdiſtan, thy foes a no more. — And thou, Sadi, turn to Iſpahan, if thy diſconte are no more: while they remain ſearch muſt be vain for happineſs. Children of the duſt! learn to ſign yourſelves to the will of Pr vidence.

The Princeſs of Curdiſtan depa ed, and the Genius in an inſt conveyed Sadi to his houſe at Iſp han, which he found a friend h taken care to ſecure for him, w his treaſures, in his abſcence. He lived there long and happy, married, and had ſeven children, to all of whom he taught this leſſon, that happineſs is only to be found in a contented Mind.
